

The Stones River Campaign

A BGES Field University Program

with Dan Masters

July 10-13, 2025; from Smyrna, TN

In the busy month of December 1862, as the Union suffered resounding defeats at Fredericksburg, Virginia, and along the steep banks of Vicksburg, Mississippi—including the failed Chickasaw Bayou expedition—newspapers in both the North and South carried headlines that alternately sank and lifted morale. Yet amid these high-profile battles, a less-publicized but arguably more significant campaign was unfolding in the heart of the conflict: middle Tennessee.

Federal Maj. Gen. William S. Rosecrans organized, equipped, and led what could be considered the nation's first modern army, the Army of the Cumberland, south from Nashville, Tennessee, to the railroad town of Murfreesboro, steadily tightening Union control over middle Tennessee and pushing deeper into the Confederacy heartland. In response, Confederate Gen. Braxton Bragg moved his Army of Tennessee northward, preparing a surprise winter attack—an unusual choice, as 19th-century armies typically avoided major military operations in that season. Nevertheless, both sides remained highly active throughout December. Bragg's offensive initially met with success, but a determined and resilient defense by elements of Rosecrans' army ultimately turned the tide, securing a crucial Northern victory.

Now, in what promises to be an excellent tour, BGES is delighted to bring author, historian, and rising star Dan Masters to the battlefield at Stones River for an in-depth, three-day tour. We will cover the strategic approaches of both armies to Murfreesboro, the campaign plans of Rosecrans and Bragg, and the intense combat over two days of fighting along the banks of Stones River, a battle that would determine control of middle Tennessee and force one side to relinquish the region.

Author of Hell by the Acre: A Narrative History of the Stones River Campaign (Savas Beatie, 2024), Dan Masters brings keen new insights and newly uncovered primary sources to this pivotal engagement, allowing the voices of its participants to speak through his research and lectures. His critically acclaimed book, released in the summer of 2024, is packed with highly detailed maps, down to the regimental and brigade level, offering an unprecedented view of the battlefield.

Join us in July for this unparalleled study of the Stones River Campaign with Dan Masters!

Itinerary

Thursday, July 10, 2025

Meet-and-greet at the headquarters hotel at 6 p.m., where you will receive detailed handouts, including maps and primary source materials. Dan will lead an engaging orientation session, outlining the chronology of the campaign and providing an overview of the key sites and events we'll explore over the next three days in the field.

Dinner is on your own.

Friday, July 11, 2025: The Road to Murfreesboro

We will begin this morning at 8 a.m., following the approach marches of Rosecrans' Federal army as he leads them south from Nashville along a couple of routes.

Following lunch, we will reverse course and pick up Bragg's movements as he led his gray-clad forces north. Along the way, we will visit key preliminary engagements at Knob Gap, Triune, and LaVergne, before concluding our day at Harker's Crossing near the Stones River Battlefield

Lunch is included, but dinner is on your own.

Saturday, July 12, 2025: Hell by the Acre: The Fighting of December 31, 1862

Today, we will start on the battlefield's south end (TN96 and Gresham Lane) and work our way north with a granular approach that covers the first day's combat like no tour has ever done before.

As part of this unique tour, we will cover the fighting from 8 a.m. until about noon, when we stop for lunch, mirroring the same timeframe in which the soldiers fought.

After a lunch break, we will pick up the afternoon of fighting, once again aligning our study with the actual sequence of events.

We will end the day at the National Cemetery at 5 p.m.

Lunch is included, but dinner is on your own.

Sunday, August 17, 2025: The Dramatic Close: Breckinridge's Attack and the Fighting of January 3rd

On our final day, we begin at Bragg's headquarters, where we will examine his critical decision to stand and fight. From there, we will explore the intense combat near McFadden's Ford.

Following lunch, we will discuss the aftermath of the battle and the final engagements on January 3 before concluding our journey at the Hazen Monument in the Round Forest. We'll return to our headquarters hotel, bringing our tour to a close.

Lunch is included, but dinner is on your own.
